Acknowledgments:

This book could not have come together without the contribution of Seth Poppel and his fabulous collection of high school yearbooks, which MEMORIES magazine has long used and which was the source of more than half of the entries here.

Patty Greenbaum, Lisa Lewis, Anne Drake and Zazel Loven, all members of MEMORIES's staff, each worked tirelessly to augment Seth's collection. Miss Drake deserves special credit for dedication—and proofreading—above and beyond the call of duty. And if the book is any single individual's accomplishment, it is that of art director Andrea Gallo, who is responsible for the book's organization, look and feel.

Publisher Greg Coleman took the initiative to make it happen, literary agent Carol Mann found the exactly right publisher (with a little help from Diamandis Communications Inc. attorneys Catherine Flickinger and Yvette Miller), and Doubleday editor Paul Bresnick provided much-needed spiritual support and guidance.

And speaking of Diamandis Communications, no acknowledgment would be complete without heartfelt thanks to president and CEO Peter Diamandis, whose idea MEMORIES was in the first place and without whose support the magazine never would have happened.

Introduction

This book was born, as many things are, out of confusion. It was the spring of 1987 and everyone was running for President of the United States. Well, not everyone. A few of us were trying to invent a magazine about the recent past. MEMORIES, it was going to be called; that much we knew.

We also knew that we wanted it to be as different from the dry history courses of our school days as we could make it. We wanted it to be lively, irreverent, fun, witty, intelligent, thoughtful, relevant, entertaining—all the things we hope it turned out to be.

Most of our articles, we decided, would be “anniversary driven.” That is, we would look at events of 20, 25, 30, 40 and 50 years ago with all the advantages of 20/20 hindsight, not only laying out what happened then but updating the story to now.

We also wanted to bring a perspective to contemporary events, like the Presidential campaign then looming so large on the political horizon. But how to make sense of a campaign that seemed to have as many candidates as voters? And one in which most of them seemed interchangeable. As Butch Cassidy put it to the Sundance Kid about the posse that kept stalking them, “Who are those guys?”

At a staff meeting, an editor spoke up. “I bet,” the editor said, “you could get a better fix on who the candidates are and what they stand for by reading their high school yearbooks than by reading their position papers.”

“Say that again!” I said.

The editor did.

And that’s how our most popular feature started. That, too, though we didn’t know it at the time, was how this volume was conceived.

Getting the yearbooks was more difficult than we had expected. First we had to track down where the candidates went to school. Some of the schools we contacted were obliging; others were not. Many wanted the candidates’ permission, which meant more calls and letters. In the end, for our first issue, we came up with the yearbook photographs of 18 Presidential candidates, including the two eventual nominees, George Walker Bush (Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., 1942) and Michael Dukakis (Brookline High School, Brookline, Mass., 1951).

Just as we hoped, the yearbook entries turned out to be wonderfully revealing, confirming a long-held conviction that high school is life and that who you are there is who you turn out to be. Thus, “Poppy” Bush was practically running Andover: president of the Society of Inquiry, chairman of the Student Deacons, president of the Greeks (funny, he didn’t look Greek), captain of the soccer team and member of the editorial board of the school newspaper.

To no one’s surprise, our yearbook feature was an immediate success. Most of the 1,000 letters we received about the new magazine asked for an encore. We were only too happy to oblige, and we’ve carried the feature ever since.

For the most part, the high-school-is-life rule has held true. Donald Trump was voted “Ladies’ Man” of New York Military Academy’s class of 1964. Robert Zimmerman (Bob Dylan) wanted “to join Little Richard” after graduating from Hibbing (Minn.) High School in 1959. Comedian Steve Martin was president of the Jason’s Jesters Club at Garden Grove (Calif.) High School in 1963.

Writer Ray Bradbury was “headed for literary distinction” back in 1938 at Los Angeles High School, and Joyce Carol Oates had already discovered “the power of thought—the magic of words” at Williamsville (N.Y.) Central High School, 1956. Pat Sajak, Farragut High School, Chicago, 1964, wanted to become a radio announcer, and Oprah Winfrey was voted “most popular” in her class, 1971, at East High School in Nashville.

I could go on. But part of the pleasure of this book is making your own discoveries. And if you have half as much fun reading it as we have had putting it together, you’re in for a treat.

Venturing into a certain well-known room in Main you are likely to think you are interrupting the prologue of a miniature Roxy, for such is the disconcerting impression created by the moving strains of Jim's accordion and the bellowing efforts of his companions. Nor is music "Jim's" only talent, for his skill in drawing has long been the pride of the Karux Board. In spite of Cicero's best attempts to overcome him, "Jim" is a good student and invariably comes out on top. Princeton

Joan was delegated co-chairman of the Cavalcade because of all her previous efforts in theatrical activities. She performed in the '47 and '49 school Cavalcades and was v.p. of the Dramatic Club in '49. Although her principal interests are acting and lindyng, her record on the art staff of the Adelphian and Oracle speaks for itself. Joan's original cartoons added flavor and freshness to the school newspaper. Keep up that alert spirit and ready wit, Joan, and you are bound to succeed.

Sam Walton
David Henry Hickman High School
1936, Columbia, Mo.
 Hats off to the President! Executive Student President. . . Presiding over assemblies is just one of the numerous duties of our president, Sam Walton, affectionately known by his many friends and classmates as "Sammy." In addition to his routine duties, the president serves as our official host at school, and as our representative when away from it. The highest office in our democratic form of government goes to one who earns it by his leadership, service, and ability. Sam Walton has gained this distinction. unobtrusive rhinie entered the vaulted halls of Kennedy and promptly won his first but not last political campaign. B.C. endowed with true political blood was elected rhinie rep, and soon established himself as a humorist, a gentleman, and a scholar.
Under his guidance the Kennedy Eagle was nourished from a cheeping eaglet to a powerful bronze ruler of the skies. A permanent Cum Laude member this year
... B.C. has more than proven his intellectual abilities. But it is as a generous friend that we like him most. His unselfish devotion to this edition of the Olla Podrida is an excellent example of his industry and capability. Even at that, B.C. is no grind.
His ability to understand "book larnin" is as deep a mystery as why he persists in wearing "Canal Boats." But for so talented a youth, we forgive nonconformity and high shoes. We have ample guarantee that B.C.
will follow in his father's footsteps. We do not shout "Good Luck" for luck will have no share in B.C.'s assured future success.
